A BIG SUCCESS.

Perfection Separator Does the Work

The Perfection grain separator, a newly patented machine, will separate the grain from the chaff, "Friend," its inventor says. "Friend," G. H. Blewett & Co., with Blewett & Stelle at the right corner of the square, are state managers for the machine, which is a revolution in the science of seed cleaning last week.

In the "Perfection" separates the bad wheat or poor wheat from good wheat, poor cuts from better oats, oats from rye, etc., all in one operation. The machine will do all the work, until it is so well cleaned that the seed, as small as it can hardly be seen when mixed with other seed, when used in another seed, will work certainly wonderful. All were interested in the hopper and the work done.

The machine is coming out at one aperture, the lower end coming at another. Big, fat, round grain, when mixed with the smaller and imperfect grain, will drop out in front, while the side of the smaller and imperfect grain, when mixed with the good seed, was in any way. The other seed came out at another place.

One of the features of the machine especially noteworthy is its simplicity. The main difference between it and other separators is that it has a forward movement of the ridges instead of a sideways and a sheet of cloth over the ridges, which is a great improvement from dropping lengths through the holes.

It will handle 500 bushels of grain a day and a larger size will handle 1000, easily and quickly. It is a great economy for the farmer. G. H. Blewett & Co., Waco, Texas, to separate all grain and weed seeds and to remove all foreign material from the grain at a cost of second, and it is a fact that the marking of difference in price between the Perfection and other separators is due to the fact that the Perfection will pay the cost of the machine—so in a very short time it will pay for itself.

There is nothing in the market like it. It is a great help to the farmer to separate all the grain from wheat.

The Perfection is now being sold at a price of $100. It is doing very well up to date.
